There appears to be no cessation in the willitary establishment to plan far in advance. So it is. But there is a difference between mere planning for a military or naval program and the concentrated effort that actually means a use of the mobilized power. Many people in the United States entertained the notion last April that WE have a larger demand for Unfurnished Houses and Apartments than we can fill.

Many people in the United States entertained the notion last April that the war would be over by the autumn of this year; others said by Christmas. If a poil could have been taken outside of Washington, most Americans would have guessed on a short wer. But the impression that the men who know what is getting on men who know what is getting on give is that it is a long haul ahead. Lord Kitchener didn't popularize himself by predicting three years of war in 1914, and no member of President Wilson's Cabinet wants to do any predicting at all. Yet their privately expressed views do not indicate a belief that the war is near its end, but life that the war is near its end, but lief that the war is near its end, but that it is in the very middle stage of its duration.

"The war will be over when we have won," said one Cabinet secretary as he outlined in a general way plans for next year, and the year after and so on. He did not underestimate or overestimate Germany's strength. He merely estimated the time it would take for the slight strength to deal the effective blows which will mean victory, apparent as well as deal the effective blows which will mean victory, apparent as well as real. That man's judgment is all the more worth taking, because if there were a ray of peace on the horizon he would know it, and if there were a chance for peace he would be among the first to help drive for it.

End Is Not In Sight.

When Premier Lloyd George said peace was not in sight he expressed exactly the viewpoint of Government officials here. The end is not in sight. America is just beginning—and to entente minds that means a new stage in the war, a new reason for waiting until the full weight of American might on be halfed. American might can be hurled against the German lines. Can Germany hold out? Have the

Can Germany hold out? Have the Central Powers enough food? They would not have had enough if Russia had remained intact and Roumania, unbeaten.
